

Live and Let Live Farm Saves 100's of Lives in Struggling Economy

Hoedown Jamboree Fundraiser, Saturday, October 8th, Proceeds Benefit the Rescue and Rehabilitation of Horses and Other Animals, Many Given Up Due to Increase in Jobless Rate and Home Foreclosures

Concord, NH (PRWEB) August 04, 2011 -- Live and Let Live Farm in Chichester, NH, is holding a fundraiser to assist with medical care, feeding and housing of animals impacted by the economic downturn. When economic hardships hit, people naturally look to where they can conserve. If they are fortunate enough to have a job or other source of income, they can pinch pennies, cut luxuries, and stretch their resources. It is the nature of the human condition to reach deep into our hearts and find strength in times of trouble. Humans seek comfort, companionship, understanding and love.

Animals are no different. They instinctively know when they must draw on survival skills. Left in the wild with no dependence on us humans, they undoubtedly would seek a new path to resources when their habitat is threatened.

The US Economy is slowly recovering, but there are many humans and animals that are still dependent on one another for survival. The last three years have seen a rise in animal rescues, abandonment, and interventions. If people cannot feed themselves, what will happen to their companion animals?

The Live and Let Live Farm in Chichester, New Hampshire, is a 501c3 not-for-profit, animal rehabilitation and rescue shelter; providing sanctuary for abused, neglected and unwanted animals, initially, mostly horses. Since the beginning of the economic downturn, Live and Let Live Farm has expanded its mostly large animal rescue to assisting families and individuals who can no longer care for their companions. This has expanded the farm's need to feed more than 60 horses; plus dogs and cats destined for kill shelters, birds, rabbits, sheep, emus; and even a few people who had lost their homes, traded volunteer hours for sheltering their animals at the farm.

Live and Let Live Farm's Executive Director, Teresa Paradis, never says no to helping a fellow traveler, be it human or animal. Now she is hoping you will say YES to giving what you can to save, feed and house these innocent victims of a world in recovery.

The Live and Let Live Farm fundraiser is on Saturday, October 8, 2011, at the farm located in the greater Concord, NH area. The public is invited to come and enjoy an evening of outstanding entertainment by the Jimmy Lehoux Band (www.jimmylehoux.net), a silent auction and raffle supported by New Hampshire Businesses, and delicious food provided by the Famous Dave's BBQ (www.famousdaves.com). Tickets for the event are on sale at <http://www.liveandletlivefarm.org> or by calling the farm at 603-798-5615

Businesses and individuals can also sponsor the event, make a contribution, or give a gift-in-kind, through multi-leveled sponsorship packages, which help to rehabilitate, provide medical and wellness assistance, education, adoptions assistance, food and equipment, and materials for building new shelter space.
